

Staying on Track with MindBody and QuickBooks

If you're in the health and wellness industry, you are fully aware of the hours wasted daily dealing with disconnected records, managing customer data, and fighting with outdated or archaic payment systems.

You probably use a scheduling system like MindBody to run your business, but it's probably not synced to your marketing machine as closely as you'd like and it's certainly not connected to your accounting system.

Fortunately, API integrations, business automation, and helping enterprises reduce repetitive work and overhead are becoming more and more accepted by small business owners as worthwhile investments.

MindBody Sales and Source Reporting

Is there a sudden up-tick in walkins? Did one of your competitors close without notice or are your expensive radio ads finally paying off? Where are your customers coming from?

Although MindBody has many useful reports for analyzing your sales, your marketing team is probably interested in an easy-to-digest dashboard, similar to that produced by Google Analytics, to trace what marketing channel is producing the best results.

Depending on whether you are a single location or a multi-location business, you may be able to connect your MindBody API directly to a service like Klipolio to produce a dynamic dashboard or you might have to build some lightweight middleware to organize your data before display.

Custom MindBody QuickBooks Integrations

If your marketing and sales reports are dialed in, what about your accounting? By integrating your MindBody and QuickBooks accounts you can have end-to-end insights on:

- How does your marketing spend correlate with your income
- Are there any black holes in your conception of your business?
- Are there any areas where refunds are eating up your profits?

Although automating parts of your accounting flow is a little scary, the time saved and reduction in human error is well worth the investment. If you're selling bigger-ticket items or subscriptions on MindBody, your customers may appreciate an opportunity to qualify for a loan or create a payment plan. If your customers want to take out a loan, pay with cryptocurrency, barter, or allow their customers to split payments with others, you can leverage the MindBody API and Quickbooks to facilitate the transactions.

Whether you're a music school looking to let your students know about your upcoming classes or want to connect your killer cardio fitness class with subscribers on Twitch, MindBody can help you get there.
